SelectaDNA Supports Met Police as 32 Arrested in Retail Crime Crackdown

Operation Zoridon highlights how collaboration between police, retailers and SelectaDNA can make our communities safer for businesses and shoppers.

SelectaDNA is at the forefront of the Metropolitan Police Service's fight against retail crime as part of Operation Zoridon. The operation, which began in South West London, has now expanded city-wide and has been recognised in the College of Policing's practice bank.

During two high-profile days of action in October, officers visited 120+ stores, resulting in 32 arrests and 9 shop closures for offences including handling stolen goods, drugs, and immigration breaches.

SelectaDNA marking kits were supplied to major retailers including Sainsbury's, Tesco, Co-op, Holland & Barrett and BP. These kits allow high value or frequently stolen items to be marked with synthetic DNA, linking offenders directly to crime scenes when stolen goods are recovered. Our SelectaDNA search dog also assisted in recovering marked items, proving highly effective in supporting enforcement action.

Cheshire Constabulary use SelectaDNA to combat violence and antisocial behaviour at Football matches

In collaboration with the UK Football Policing Unit, Cheshire Constabulary recently launched SelectaDNA handheld spray as a tool to deter violence and identify offenders at football matches.

The approach was showcased at the National Football Policing Conference in September 2025 and has since been chosen by South Yorkshire Police to use during the Sheffield Derby.

SelectaDNA recognised by the College of Policing as a tool to tackle Violence Against Women and Girls

SelectaDNA Personal Defence Spray has been independently recognised by the College of Policing in their evaluation of forensic marking as a tool to help combat domestic abuse.

The report found that:

- Repeat offending dropped by 22% when forensic marking was used
- 98% of survivors said they would feel confident using SelectaDNA sprays
- Cases progressed more quickly and investigations were strengthened

The police forces involved in this pilot study continue to use SelectaDNA to protect survivors, deter offenders, and support wider efforts to make women and girls safer – with proof that SelectaDNA can have a life-changing impact.

SelectaDNA drives the fight against tool theft with Police Forces across the UK

SelectaDNA is partnering with Police Forces and Councils nationwide to protect tradespeople and small businesses from tool theft.

In Sussex, PCC Katy Bourne's investment in Tool Marking Kits is helping deter criminals and protect livelihoods. Similar initiatives in Havering with the Metropolitan Police and in Gravesend with Kent Police are engaging communities, reducing theft, and strengthening trust between police and local businesses.
